

Newlyweds aid township trust

HONEYMOONERS usually use their break to build their future together – but one Irish couple decided to use the time for some actual construction work. Paul and Sonya Browne from the Ennis Road in Co Limerick are among 500 volunteers who have begun work on the latest building blitz by the Niall Mellon Township Trust in South Africa. The group began work yesterday and hopes to complete 75 houses in a township near Cape Town by this weekend. The charity has built more than 11,000 houses since 2002.
